THE "RAPID,"
A DOUBLE-ACTION ICE-CREAM FREEZER,
Is the result of a careful study of the requirements of an efficient, durable and economical Freezer. The principles of its construction present the following meritorious points: Double action of the can and beater; these revolving at high speed in opposite directions, gives the desired result with much saving of time and labor. The acceptable form of the beater, producing a very smooth quality of Ice-Cream, and, by aeration, increasing its bulk two-fold. An improved "scraper" which, adjusting itself automatically, to the side of the can, thoroughly removes the frozen cream adhering thereto, the same being replaced by the less frozen portion transferred from the centre by the action of the beater. The enlarged capacity of the can is guaranteed to hold fully five per cent. more than the quantity designated.

The Use of Cement Pipe for Sewers.
The following veto was filed with City Clerk Geary yesterday afternoon:
To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Utica:
The following action of your honorable body Friday evening, April 2, 1886, is hereby returned without my approval. (Here is given at length the resolution adopted by the Council providing for a cement sewer in Albany street.)
The sewerage of our city is a very important matter, both from a sanitary and financial standpoint.
Our City Surveyor, who is thoroughly competent to judge, has recommended vitrified sewer pipe as the cheapest, safest and best. Since this question was brought before the Council I have received over thirty letters from surveyors and engineers of different cities unanimously testifying to the superiority of this pipe, and stating that it is now universally used throughout the country.
Then why does the Council insist on putting down cement?
Some Aldermen say the people petition for it—there is some force in that I admit—but are they the only parties interested in this matter? When the sewers prove defective (as they are doing continually) the city, and not the people must foot the bills.
And are we to pay any attention to the wail that was dinned into our ears last fall about the sewer gas in the cellars and houses of our citizens? I think we should. If these evils are to be remedied the city should have a voice in the choice of pipe, and I claim should accept the advice of its Surveyor as having had the most experience in such matters.
The only real argument that has been or can be made in favor of the cement pipe we are now using is that it is manufactured here, and a prominent politician is interested in its sale.
It seems to me this is not forcible enough to justify jeopardizing the lives of our citizens through defective sewerage, and the depletion of their pockets in trying to maintain a system with inferior pipe.
This is too expensive and dangerous a monopoly for this Council to encourage or maintain.

Cement Sewer Pipe.
OSHKOSH, Oct. 29, 1884.—For the information of those who are misled concerning Cement Sewer-pipe, I wish to state that such sewer pipe is being very extensively manufactured and used in the State of Wisconsin, and is preferred to vitrified. First, for its great strength and durability, it being from one-third to one-half stronger, and less liable to crush in the ditch. Being solidly packed, in making, between iron moulds, it becomes impervious to water or acids, and, if one of these pipes, such as made in Wisconsin, is cemented tight at one end and filled with water, the water will stay there until it evaporates, which shows that it does not filter through. The older this pipe gets, the harder and more rock-like it becomes. Second, this pipe is preferred to all others on account of its shape. The larger sizes are egg-shape, contracting the flow in a narrow channel at the bottom, increasing its velocity, keeping it clean and at the same time having a large area above for a larger volume of water when needed. It also has a flat base, which makes it lay firm in the ditch, keeping it to shape, while a round pipe is more liable to roll and get out of shape, either in the filling or settling of the ditch. Cement pipe has been used for sewers in England and various parts of the old world for over one hundred years, and has proved indestructible, either by the action of sewage or time, and is still very extensively used in London and various other European cities. Brooklyn, N. Y., has over fifty miles of cement pipe sewers, laid from twenty to forty years ago, and still giving perfect satisfaction. Query: Why is cement used in brick sewers, and plastered all over the interior surface? Simply because sewage will not go through it to be filtered through the porous brick. Yours respectfully, C. R. HEWITT.

THE HEROES OF THE NAVY.

Honors to Those who Kept Their Oaths and were True to the Flag.

A Tribute to the Southern Loyalists.

In the House of Representatives on Monday, Aug. 2, '86, during the consideration of the conference report upon the bill providing for the construction of new vessels for the Navy, Mr. Boutelle, of Maine, called attention to the speech printed by Mr. Herbert, of Alabama, the Chairman of the Naval Committee, in which Semmes and other of the Confederate freebooters were awarded first mention in the "roll of honor" of the Navy, and entered his protest against such classification, in the following remarks:

Mr. Boutelle—Mr. Speaker, I regret exceedingly that my colleague, the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, seems unwilling to make the frank amendment of his remarks which I had expected him to make. He stands recorded in his speech, printed after the debate and vote upon the naval increase bill, as arraigning the Republicans on this side of the Chamber for opposition to the bill which by the Record they are shown to have favored by voice and vote at every stage during the proceedings on that question. But as my colleague seems unwilling to modify his remarks in that regard, I will leave the Record to stand and speak for itself.

There is one other passage in the chairman's speech to which I feel it my duty to call attention. In the closing part of his remarks, in a very eloquent eulogy of the personnel of the Navy, the gentleman from Alabama said, after citing the gallant acts of John Paul Jones, of Preble, Perry, Hull, McDonough, and Lawrence, in the war of 1812:

"Look at our civil war—at Federals and confederates—Americans all."

And then the chairman of the Naval Committee of the United States House of Representatives went on to enumerate a list, selecting such names in the order of merit as it appeared to his mind, as the men who had rendered illustrious that great branch of our military service. And his enumeration was in this order:

"There was Catesby Jones in the Merrimac at Hampton Roads; Buchanan on the Tennessee in Mobile Bay; Brooke, who designed the great ironclad; Hunter Davidson constructing torpedoes; Maffit, with a genius born of audacity, running the blockade in open day in the presence of a hostile fleet whose officers could not believe, until the feat was almost accomplished, that an enemy would dare to attempt it; and there was Waddell in the Shenandoah, and Semmes, bold rover of the seas, who developed that branch of warfare inaugurated by the United States in the war of 1812, and whose wonderful career was cut short only when those two American game-cocks met—the Alabama and the Kearsarge. All these were officers trained in the American Navy.

"And on the Union side there were the passage of the batteries at Vicksburg, the capture of the forts on the Mississippi, the exploits of the fleet at Fort Fisher, and many other engagements in which officers and men distinguished themselves by their gallantry. There was Porter, bold, indefatigable, fertile in expedient; John Rodgers, chivalrous and cultivated; Jouett, full of dash and courage; and Dupont and Truxton and Farragut; and there were Worden and his men, whose courage in trusting themselves to go down in the untried Monitor and out to sea, while the waves dashed over it, even surpassed, if possible, the gallantry with which they fought that vessel when it was in that great contest with the Merrimac."

Now, without dwelling upon the question of taste involved in this classification of the naval heroes of the war, I am willing to assume for the moment that the mind of my friend may have reverted to other days, and he may possibly have thought for the time being that he was addressing another congress that once assembled in another place within the limits of his own State. But to the ordinary reader of American history it seems to me that the heroes of the United States Navy would appear in a different order and I would be unfaithful to my own convictions of justice to the gallant men of that splendid corps were I to fail to call attention to this remarkable enumeration of the men who are held up to the admiration of the country by the official representative of the naval branch of the service in a public speech in the Congress of the United States. Here are several men of the confederate service placed first on the roster of fame as officers in the Navy of the United States. Three of these were comparatively obscure officers of the Navy; three others who are thus honored, Semmes, Maffit, and Waddell, won a sort of distinction not generally coveted by brave men, and were only saved from being classed as corsairs by a construction of maritime law now happily become obsolete.

Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the gentleman from Alabama when he saw fit to speak of the great names that the Navy had given to this country failed to make a different classification. If I had made up the gentleman's list for him I would most cheerfully have given the first place on the list to a man of Southern birth.

I should have been proud to have placed first a name which the gentleman has relegated to a subordinate and obscure position in his bead-roll. I should have been proud to have named first as the history of the Navy, the history of the country, and the common award of mankind would place first, the name of "that noblest Roman of them all," David Glascoe Farragut, of Tennessee. I would have named other officers from that part of our land. I could have named men who, filled with that nobler than mere physical courage, remained in spite of every personal influence faithful to the country's flag; who, though nurtured and trained under the influence of that fatal dogma that made a man's supreme allegiance due to his State rather than to his country, yet, when the hour of trial came, rose superior to early prejudice, resisted the seductive pleadings of State-rights advocates and held more sacred than all other obligations the oath they had taken in their youth to pledge "their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor" to the defense of their common country.

And first, I would name that peerless naval chieftain and hero, Admiral Farragut, a name which recalls the glories of New Orleans and Mobile Bay and Vicksburg, and all the grand achievements that have placed his name unchallenged among the greatest captains of the world's history; I would add the names of Stribling and Shubrick, of South Carolina, both of whom had grown gray in their country's service when the war broke out, and who devoted their last years as they did their first to the service of their country. South Carolina has always been foremost in its claims of chivalrous devotion to the State, and has made recognition of State supremacy more arbitrarily the test of public favor than any other community; and this consideration adds to the credit and the honorable significance of the fact that of all the officers of the United States Navy from the State of South Carolina who had reached the grade of commander at the outbreak of the war only two of them deserted the flag of the nation to follow the flag of the confederacy. Those two were gallant officers in the olden time—Duncan N. Ingraham, who gained a national fame by his rescue of Martin Koszta from an Austrian fleet, and Henry J. Hartstene, who led a famous polar expedition and delivered the rescued Resolute to the British Government. These men rendered faithful service to their country before the war and conspicuous service to the confederacy, but they failed to find mention in the gentleman's list.

But grander and more illustrious to my mind are those sons of South Carolina who remained true to the flag they had sworn to defend, in spite of all temptation, and who fought gallantly to preserve the life of the American Republic and to render it possible for the gentleman to speak of a common country to-day. I recall a number of such names that deserve to be remembered and ought to be mentioned here. William B. Shubrick, Cornelius K. Stribling; John L. Misroon, who, when in command of the frigate Sabine, in 1862, tenderly cared for the welfare of two sisters whose residences were within the lines of the two armies, while he sturdily and gallantly fought his own brother on the confederate side; Edward Middleton, who gave up home and property as a sacrifice to his sense of duty; Percival Drayton, that magnificent lieutenant of Farragut, one of the noblest officers whose name ever illumined the roster of any service; Drayton, in the Pocahontas, fighting his own brother in chief command on the confederate side, holding Stono River against the rebels in 1862, gallantly assaulting Fort McAllister and Fort Sumter in 1863, and acting as Farragut's trusted fleet captain in that magnificent passage of the forts in Mobile Bay, everywhere earning fresh laurels, and dying at the close of the war in the fullness of his powers, but too soon for his grateful country to reward him as he deserved.

Charles Steedman, my old and revered commander, son of a former mayor of Charleston, and who had himself shouldered a musket on the Union side in nullification times, was another gallant gentleman who early won distinction on the Bienville at Port Royal, and afterward on the Paul Jones earned the honors that he so gracefully wears as a retired rear-admiral. And there were J. P. Bankhead and H. Rolando, also from South Carolina, but true to their allegiance when the trial came.

These sons of South Carolina were so conspicuous in their loyalty to the Union cause that the Legislature was said to have passed an act denouncing them by name as forever infamous. When the gallant Drayton was informed of this reported action of the Legislature of his native State he is said to have quietly remarked that he should endeavor to obtain a certified copy of the act, and would leave it to his posterity as the highest honor ever conferred upon him.

Another name that I would wish to add to the list of the Southern-born naval heroes of the war is that of Alexander C. Rhind, of Georgia, under whose command I feel it an honor to have served. This daring and impetuous officer, when in 1863 he was in command of the double-turreted iron-clad Keokuk in the great naval assault on Fort Sumter, ordered his pilot to put his vessel as near the fort as her draught of water would admit that he might try his heavy guns at short range upon the brick walls. The little vessel, having the lightest armor of any of the ironclads, was placed within five hundred yards of the fort and held her position thirty minutes, during which time she was struck ninety times and nineteen shot went through her at and below the water-line; but she was bravely handled to the last, and sank at her anchors in the channel next morning.

A colored pilot had been assigned to the Keokuk, and the captain, with some of the traditional prejudice, was doubtful whether a negro could have the nerve for such a desperate battle. After the fight he frankly attested that no man could have been cooler, that the colored pilot "handled the ship in that hell of fire as though we had been on drill."

The intrepid Rhind is now a rear-admiral on the retired-list, and the pilot who shared the honors of that splendid exploit is a native of South Carolina, and now worthily represents the people on this floor, Hon. Robert Smalls.

If I had made out the gentleman's list I would have given the meed of praise to other tried and true men of the South, to whom the nation owes its gratitude. Upon the active-list of the Navy in 1860 were seventy-nine captains, which was then the highest grade; of these seventy-nine there were twenty-one of Southern birth, of whom eleven went into the rebellion. Of one hundred and fourteen commanders then on the active-list forty-one were of Southern birth and nineteen of the forty-one seceded. So that of the one hundred and ninety-three officers of the two highest grades of the Navy when the war began sixty-three, or one-third, were of Southern birth, and less than one-half of them proved recreant when their country summoned them to its defense.

Among those who reached the highest rank during the war were Admirals Farragut, of Tennessee; S. P. Lee, of Virginia, long in command of the South Atlantic squadron; H. H. Bell, of North Carolina, Farragut's second in command at New Orleans; W. B. Shubrick, of South Carolina, and E. E. F. Lavalette and William Radford, of Virginia. The rank of commodore was won by Misroon, Glendy, Turner, Smith, W. D. Porter, and Craven; and as captains were Taylor, Drayton, Winslow, Berrien, Carter, Steedman, Middleton, Pennock, Scott, Patterson, and a long list of others.

Of these John A. Winslow, of North Carolina, in command of the Kearsarge, fought and sunk the Alabama in a little more than an hour, and thus summarily ended the career of Semmes as a "bold rover of the seas," the first time that he encountered an antagonist in fair fight.

I have thus confined myself to suggesting the names of Southern-born men which might well have been placed by the chairman of the Naval Committee on his roll of honor; and they are the more entitled to the distinction because of the powerful influences they had to resist in remaining true to their country.

There are other names from other sections of the country that will be fitly remembered side by side with those of Farragut and S. P. Lee and Bell and Drayton and Winslow and Steedman and Rhind and their noble associates.

History will never let injustice be done to Dupont's first great and inspiring victory at Port Royal; to Foote's early triumphs at Donelson and Fort Henry; to Porter's brilliant achievements on the Mississippi; to Rowan's gallant seizure of the North Carolina Sounds; to Thatcher, Palmer, and Sampson, at the capture of Mobile; to Worden's timely and glorious defeat of the Merrimac with the Monitor at Hampton Roads; to Rodgers capturing the Atlanta; to Roe, in the Sassacus, fearlessly grappling with the ironclad Albemarle; to Cushing's startling exploits; to Craven's self-sacrificing chivalry, as he uttered the memorable words, "After you, pilot," and went down with his sinking ship.

These are but a few of the shining lights among the galaxy of heroes whose deeds will render the United States Navy illustrious forever. I need not attempt to enumerate them here. My object has been simply to hold up to the future heroes of the naval service and to the youth of our land examples that will tend to increase their devotion to their country and strengthen the sense of the paramount duty they owe to its institutions and its flag.

The Speaker—The time of the gentleman has expired.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

Two men reported to the officers at the police station, Wednesday evening, says the Lewiston Journal, that they had just seen a man attempt to cross the logs near Wood's steam mill just above the city, and that suddenly the man disappeared. Hurrying to the place, they saw the ripples that the plunge of some heavy body had made into the water. They found a soft hat floating on the water and they left the hat that they had found, with the City Marshal at the station, where it was Thursday morning. It is a soft, dark felt, and not badly worn. Search has been made all the morning, but no trace of the body gained. No one is reported missing in this vicinity.

C. A. Phillips' farm at South Gardiner, occupied by himself and family as a temporary residence was burned to the ground Tuesday between four and five o'clock P. M. Loss on building and furniture about $600. Insured in Berry's agency. Mr. Phillips has indeed been very unfortunate, for the past fourteen years, having lost during that period two wives, one child, and dwelling house in addition to the loss above stated, besides meeting with many reverses.

The little son of Mr. F. O. Lanpher, of Dover, accidentally fell from the flooring of the new Bank Block, a distance of several feet, into the basement and struck upon a pile of brick. When found, the little fellow was unconscious, but recovered soon after being taken up. He sustained injuries upon the hip and side of the head, but not of a serious nature, however.

Somerset.

Abraham P. Williams, the United States Senator from California, says the Fairfield Journal, was born at New Portland in 1830. His education was common school and academic, and having taken it in with thoroughness and persistency which marked the typical scholar of those times, he swayed the birchen sceptre himself for a time. In early manhood he came to Fairfield to settle and clerked here in a store for some time, then went into trade on his own account and lived here for some time. The outbreak of the gold fever drew his attention, with that of so many of the brightest young men of the East, to the wealth of the West, and in the course of the fifties he emigrated to California, and at first engaged in mining, but afterwards went into trade, and for some time carried on the profitable but risky business of peddling miners' supplies. While conveying a large budget through a wild stretch of country to a mining camp, he was raided by Indians and his cargo confiscated. Whether impelled by this disaster or not we are not informed, he not long after entered the employ of Webster & Turner, wholesale liquor dealers, as a commercial traveler, and continued with them for some time. He afterwards became connected with Livingston and Leach, engaged in the same business, and subsequently acquired an interest in the firm of which he is now a leading member, although under a different firm name. Mr. Williams has been twice married, to Miss Jane Dunbar, of this place, daughter of Lewis Dunbar, and to her sister, Miss Bethania Dunbar.

York.

About three months ago the Pepperel company received from Platt brothers of England, through their Boston agents, F. A. Lee & Co., a shipment of new cards. They were put into Overseer Spencer's room in the No. 1 mill, and William Graves was sent here to oversee the work of setting them up. The work was to have been completed to-morrow, all but one card having been placed in position. Early this afternoon Mr. Graves was at work upon one of the cards, when by some unaccountable means, his sleeve was caught by the machinery and his right hand drawn in between the doffer and the cylinder, tearing off the flesh up as far as the elbow and bruising the bone in a shocking manner. The unfortunate man was taken to Dr. Warren's where it was found necessary to amputate the arm just below the elbow.

Mr. Graves belongs in England and has been in Platt Brothers' employ for years. So efficient was he that he was employed as foreman in their shops for a long time. He was finally sent to this country to have general charge of the setting up of all machinery sold here by the firm.—Biddeford Times.

Aroostook County.

The County of Aroostook contains 6,800 square miles. The State of Maine contains 31,500 square miles or 1,200 more than all the rest of New England, and Aroostook County embraces more than one-fifth of the area of Maine. This one Maine County is more than four times as large as Rhode Island, a third larger than Connecticut, three-fourths as large as Vermont and four-fifths as large as New Hampshire. It is watered by the St. John, which forms a portion of its eastern and northern boundary and by the tributaries of that river, the chief of which are the Aroostook, the Madawaska and the Meduxnekeag. The small tributaries of these latter rivers are very numerous and ramify all parts of the County, which is bountifully watered. Only a comparatively small portion of this great County has, as yet, been settled, and the remainder is covered by the primeval forests. The composition of these forests vary in different parts of the County. Large areas are covered with a hard wood growth, consisting of the sugar maple, birch, and beech; scattered through this growth almost everywhere, are huge cedars as large and as tall as the surrounding trees. In the northern half of the County, the cone bearing trees, such as the pine, spruce, hemlock, and fir predominate, though these trees are more or less scattered through the County. The surface of this County is undulating or rolling. There are few mountains or high hills and scarcely any level plains, except intervale belts on the rivers.

The soil consists of a rich loam, from two to ten feet deep. Vegetable mould is frequently found at the latter depth. The bed rock is a calcareous slate and the soil is rich in lime. The fertility of the soil appears to be almost unlimited; yielding bountiful crops for many years in succession without fertilization. In different parts of the County are found the ores of iron, also sandstone and roofing slate. There are rich beds of clay, ample for building purposes. Many of the eastern townships are so free from stone that it is frequently found difficult to obtain enough for stoning up cellars, and the hewn trunks of the huge cedars are often substituted. The staple products of the County are potatoes and other root crops, grass, the cereal grains, more especially wheat, oats, barley and buck-wheat, and hops. It is the best potato county in New England, and more potato starch is manufactured in Aroostook County than in all the rest of New England. The average of potatoes is about three hundred bushels to the acre, but four hundred bushels is not there regarded as a remarkable crop. The average of wheat and oats, per acre, is much greater than in the western or southern States. But little was known of the agricultural importance of Aroostook County even by the people of our own State, until attention was called to it by the difficulties attending the settlement of the north-eastern boundary, which nearly culminated in war. This was in 1838-9, and when the County was incorporated in 1839, it had a population of only about 9,000, and these chiefly French and Province People. Population in 1830, 3,399; 1840, 9,413; 1850, 12,529; 1860, 22,479; 1870, 29,609; 1880, 41,700.

There have been surveyed one hundred and seven townships, each six miles square, but only fifty of these have been settled so as to receive names. Many of the townships are owned by non-residents, some single individuals, holding upwards of a hundred thousand acres. The roads in the County have mostly been built by means of State aid and, were well constructed. Long stretches of road have been made through the otherwise unbroken wilderness. In the settled towns are many fine farms, ranging in value from $3,000 to $10,000, and there are natural facilities for making thousands of others equally as good. Thriving villages have sprung up as at Houlton, Monticello, Sherman Mills, Patten, Fort Fairfield, Presque Isle, Caribou, Washburn, Van Buren, Fort Kent, Easton, Ashland, etc.

The choice English Grasses thrive in Aroostook County, and it is therefore one of the best stock producing sections this side of the far West. The County is already noted for its fine horses, sheep, cattle and dairy products.

Republican Unity.

The Republican County Convention, Thursday, has given our friends, the enemy, a very serious chill. They compare it with their own convention, in June last, when forty-nine forlorn Democrats got together and went through the form of placing a ticket in nomination, and the conclusion reached is neither satisfactory nor encouraging. The same condition of things was noticeable when the District Conventions were held in this city. The Republicans turned out with full ranks, while the attendance at the Democratic Convention was so meagre that it was deemed best to do away with credentials entirely and the few persons present were invited to take a part in the proceedings without the customary formality of ascertaining whether or not they were entitled to recognition. These facts are of themselves very significant. The large attendance of Republicans at this busy season of the year shows that the party is in excellent condition for the fall campaign. Instead of permitting a few men to come together and fix up a slate, as the Democrats of this county have done, the Republicans sent out a full delegation of their representative men, so that the nominations clearly reflect the sentiment of the party. Every town and plantation but one had a voice in the convention and the harmonious proceedings speak volumes for the unity of the party. The interest manifested at this early day presages a full vote, and a full vote means a rousing majority for the whole ticket this fall.

A Hard Record.

Congress has finally adjourned after a session of nearly eight months, and the record made by the House with its Democratic majority of forty is not one calculated to prove especially advantageous to the party in the fall elections. That this fact is admitted by some of the leading Democratic papers is shown by the following extract from a Washington special to the Boston Post:

The Democratic party seems to have been in a measure demoralized by success. They have had few keen and confident leaders in the House, and in spite of their forty majority have more often taken the defensive than the aggressive. Their majority has availed them little, because it has never been consolidated in support of any measure of party policy. Hopeless division has ruled the Democratic councils upon the civil service, upon the tariff, upon finance, upon the bankruptcy question, upon pensions, upon protecting the public lands—it has never been possible to secure unity in the Democratic ranks. Randall, the only man of iron on his side, has been forced into a subordinate position by his absolute disagreement with his party on its most vital issue. The eyes of the country have been upon the majority of the House and they have seen nothing but confusion—neither honest unity of purpose nor courageous unity of action.

In the last campaign the Democratic organs vigorously denounced the Republican administration of the Government, but with a Democratic President and a Democratic House they have not only failed to correct any of the alleged corruption and extravagance, but have made a record for which they already feel obliged to apologize. The total appropriations made by Congress in 1883 were, in round numbers, $232,000,000; in 1884, $170,000,000, and this year $265,000,000. Facts are stubborn things.

A Stinging Letter from a Veteran.

The Wheeling (Va.) Intelligencer is favored with the following copy of a letter just forwarded to Washington:

GLEN EATON, W. Va., July 31, 1886.
General Black, Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C.:

Sir—Your letter notifying me that my pension claim was rejected because the men who saw me injured are dead is received.

If the Government will restore me physically to the condition I was in when I enlisted I will sign a clear receipt, or, if you will state that Mr. Cleveland needs the money I should have received, for carpets and flowers for the White House, I will forgive the claim and try to forget I lost my health and have for legacy a deformed body, the result of serving my country in her hour of need.

Respectfully,
HARMON CROW.

Mr. Crow was crippled in the service and will remain a cripple till Judgment Day makes all men whole. The comrades who saw him injured have all gone to their last account, though a lieutenant of his company testifies that Harmon Crow was an able-bodied man when he was detailed upon the duty from which he was brought back crippled.

Unfortunately for Mr. Crow, he is a Republican of the Marshall County type, and the patriot who draws a pension of $100 a month in addition to his salary as Commissioner of Pensions has no special love for men of the Crow kind. Between General Black and President Cleveland a good many deserving veterans are left to look for their reward in the next world.

The loyal citizens of Maine, many of whom suffered by the cowardly depredations of the corsair Semmes, upon our unarmed merchant vessels during the war, would think it strange to hear the names of the commanders of the rebel privateers placed first on the "roll of honor" made up for the United States Navy by a Democratic chairman of the Naval Committee, from Alabama. They would think it still more strange that the chairman of such a committee, in a speech in Congress, should relegate the glorious name of FARRAGUT to an obscure position at the bottom of his list. We print on our first page to-day the protest uttered by Representative Boutelle against such perversion of the truths of history, and such gross injustice to the heroes of the U. S. Navy and especially to the gallant men of Southern birth who sacrificed everything but honor in their devotion to their country's service.

A Washington despatch says: The Republican members of the House have presented Speaker Carlisle with a silver service, costing $800, in recognition of his uniform impartiality and courtesy.

Pension Commissioner Black.

There is every prospect that when Congress assembles again, says a Washington despatch, the Senate will be called upon to confirm another Commissioner of Pensions. General Black, who at present holds that office, has gone to California to attend the G. A. R. Encampment, and at the same time secure, if possible, a vindication of his course in running the pension office. But it seems as if that vindication was to be denied him, for his action in regard to old soldiers in his department has not gained him many friends. But what threatens to be more serious still, is that the President is about to request his resignation as Commissioner of Pensions. A personal friend of General Black's in talking about the President's contemplated action says, that General Black is aware of the situation, because it was told him before he left for California. The various orders in regard to the running of pension departments, such as curtailing the powers of appointment and dismissal have been only forerunners of this last request.

The Next Campaign.

The Kingston Freeman outlines the issues of '88 in the following manner: "The issues of 1888 will be—brains against imbecility, honor against rascality, pride of patriotism against senile indifference to every interest of the people, a live American against a British lackey, a statesman against a political casualty. The country is taking up these issues now, and every pension vetoed, every rebel appointed to office, every industry crushed on land, and every fishing vessel seized upon the sea, intensifies the determination to fight the next battle out on the strict line that they define. With a man like Blaine at the head of the government the people can trust that all questions in which they are concerned will be taken care of in "a brave, an honest, a statesmanlike and an American fashion."

England and Mexico and Mr. Bayard.

[N. Y. Herald.]

Five or six thousand honest New England fishermen have been harried and worried, put to expense and loss, seized and driven about by English cruisers since early in May, and they have appealed to Mr. Bayard for months in vain for protection. One man, clearly a vagabond and disreputable person, not even a resident of his country, falls into trouble in Mexico through his own misconduct, and instantly, before even there has been time for a thorough inquiry into the circumstances of the case, Mr. Bayard imperiously demands his immediate release.

We wonder that Mr. Bayard is not solicitous lest the public, contrasting his two policies, will say that he truckles to a strong Power, England, but bullies a weak Power, Mexico.

Mexico is undoubtedly in the wrong, but so is England. Mr. Bayard is very patient with England, and, though thousands of our honest people are outraged and put to loss, and he makes the plea that the peculiar institutions and relations of Canada and England make the work of negotiation slow. But he must know that the not at all peculiar constitution of Mexico, formed upon our own, far more requires patience in dealing with her in such a case. Mexico, like this country, has a federal government and courts, and a State government and courts. Cutting is in charge of a State tribunal.

When he so peremptorily demanded the immediate release of Cutting by the Mexican Government Mr. Bayard surely forgot that when, a few months ago, the Chinese Minister appealed for justice for his people murdered—not merely held for trial before a court—he explained that under our form of government the United States were not liable for such acts as to foreigners, "so long as they have access to the courts," and that "remedies must be pursued in the proper quarter and through the avenues of justice marked out for the reparation of such wrongs."

Cutting has been offered release on bail, and refused it. He is on trial in a Mexican State Court. Certainly, considering his own recent utterances, Mr. Bayard should have been less imperative. Considering his very great patience with the Canadian outrages, he should have been more patient with our weak but friendly sister Republic.

To be humble to the strong and imperious to the weak is not the way for a Nation—or a Secretary of State—to command the esteem of honorable men.

THOUSANDS OF CASES OF

SICK

Headache are permanently cured every year (as the hundreds of testimonials in my possession will testify) by the use of Dr. Leslie's Special Prescription. This Remedy stands to-day without a rival and with scarcely a competitor in the world. Thousands of Physicians throughout the country have acknowledged their inability to cure it, and are now prescribing Dr. Leslie's Special Prescription for all cases of Sick in either its nervous, bilious or congestive form, arising from obstruction, congestion or torpidity of the liver. When I say that Dr. Leslie's Special Prescription will cure the most obstinate cases of Sick Headache, I mean just what I say, and that is, that it not merely relieves, but cures, no matter how long the case may have been standing.

HEADACHE

I have testimonials from persons who have been afflicted for twenty years, being confined to bed two or three days at a time every two weeks, that have been permanently cured by two bottles of Dr. Leslie's Special Prescription, so that they have not had an attack for over five years.

If you are troubled with Sick Headache and wish to be

be sure and give this remedy a trial. PRICE $1.00. S. B. ARCHER, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

A MOURNFUL SERVICE.

Funeral of the Victims of the Drowning Accident.

PORTLAND, Aug. 6. The funeral services of the victims of the drowning accident, by which a pleasure party of seven persons came to their deaths in the harbor Wednesday, were held in Congress street Methodist Episcopal church this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Three clergymen participated in the services and the church was crowded to its fullest capacity, many persons standing in the aisles. The caskets containing the bodies, only five of which have been recovered from the water, were placed before the chancel rail, three white caskets of children being placed between those of the aged grandparents. There was a profusion of choice flowers and floral emblems arranged in front of the platform, while on the casket of the little Cleve and girl was a pillow with the word "Emma" and on that of Janie Masters a wreath; both tokens being sent by playmates of the children.

It was a few minutes past 3 when the funeral party arrived from the house of Mr. J. R. Cleveland, where prayers had been said. At the close of the services a number of persons who availed themselves of the opportunity to look on the children for the last time was so great that it required a long time for the line to pass before the chancel. The faces of the dead wore a peaceful expression, with no trace of any suffering. The funeral procession which wended its way from the church to the grave, with carriages following the five hearses, was a spectacle such as probably has never been seen here before and was the cause of many expressions of sympathy from people along its route.

FROM AUGUSTA.

Testimonial to ex-Chief Clerk Jefferds.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6. The clerks in the railway mail service, to the number of about forty, gave a grand testimonial this evening, at the Cony House, to retiring chief clerk J. F. Jefferds. Speeches were made by those prominent in the service, and Mr. Jefferds was presented with a fine gold ring and two hundred dollars in money, the gift of the clerks.

FROM PORTLAND.

Steamship Galena on a Cruise.

PORTLAND, Aug. 6. The U. S. steamship Galena, belonging to the North Atlantic Squadron, sailed out at 10 o'clock this forenoon under sealed orders. She is provisioned for a long cruise.

ONE MORE UNFORTUNATE.

Takes her Life with Laudanum.

DOVER, N. H., Aug. 6. The body of the unfortunate young girl, who last evening died from an overdose of laudanum, was laid out this morning, when there was found tattooed on her thigh the name Lucy Lovering. She is said to belong either to Biddeford or Bangor, Me.

FROM LEWISTON.

Found Drowned in the Androscoggin.

LEWISTON, Aug. 6. Wednesday evening, parties from a distance saw a man disappear from the logs near Boxer's Island. To-night the body was recovered and found to be Jere Murphy who has been missing since Wednesday, supposed to be suicide.

SEIZED FOR SMUGGLING.

Twenty-two Boats Owned by Canadians Seized.

EASTPORT, Aug. 6. J. D. Bonness special Canadian customs officer, seized twenty-two fishing boats yesterday at Deer Island, valued from $200 to $400 each, for smuggling. The boats were released by the owners depositing the penalty, in each case amounting to the boat's value. There are two charges against them; the first for smuggling goods from Eastport; the second for smuggling the boats themselves. When the fishery treaty was abrogated Deer Island fishermen brought the boats to Eastport, entered and paid duties on them, thus making them American boats, although built and owned in Canada. The Canadian Government will not permit American boats to be brought to Canada and owned there without paying duty, so the boats become forfeited same as other smuggled goods. This will prevent New Brunswick boats from bringing sardines to Eastport without paying duties on them.

FROM BAR HARBOR.

New Arrivals—A Brilliant Hop.

BAR HARBOR, Aug. 6. Steam yacht Yosemite, Washington Connors, New York, owner, arrived to-day; also schooner Sparkle. Steam yacht Jung, all Bath, Houghton, owner, came last evening. The Tidal Wave went out for a few days cruise.

The latest distinguished arrivals are Prof. Maria Mitchell of Vassar College and Dr. E. A. Hoffman of New York. The hotels are full and the trains to-night are heavily loaded and an hour and a half late. It was cool to-day.

The hop at Rodick's this evening was a brilliant affair.

A Portland Man Arrested for Stabbing.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Aug. 6. In an altercation this afternoon William Jones hailing from Portland, stabbed George Pendleton, inflicting a dangerous wound. Jones was arrested.

VERMONT.

Railroad Accident with Fortunate Results.

BRATTLEBORO, Aug. 6. The White Mountain express, due here at 6 o'clock P. M., came into collision with a flat car a quarter of a mile below the depot in which the engine was wrecked and the baggage and two drawing room cars were thrown from the track. The train was heavily loaded, but no one was dangerously injured, though Baggage Master Snell was badly bruised by the heavy baggage and some passengers were pitched out of their seats. The train was running thirty miles an hour and was rounding a curve when the flat car was discovered, too late to prevent a collision. The car was landed on top of the engine, which was partly buried in the ground, while the track was torn up and the rails scattered and two of the three derailed cars tipped partially over. The three rear coaches remained on the track. The accident was the result of carelessness, the flat car having run down over the switch by the loosening of the brake by some workmen just before the arrival of the express. Trains are delayed from one to two hours by the accident.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Strike at the Salmon Falls Cotton Mills.

DOVER, Aug. 6. The strike at the Salmon Falls cotton mills bids fair to be a long one. The company employs 550 operatives, of whom 200 are weavers. The company manufactures sateens and fancy goods and pay 48 cents per cut of 52 yards. It has been the rule of the company for two years past that weavers shall receive no pay for cuts containing blemishes or bad places. This caused the strike yesterday, the weavers protesting against such a rule. Agent Brown claims that he was totally unaware of the impending strike. Every weaver struck. Most all of the operatives of the mills belong to the Knights of Labor. The strikers held a meeting this afternoon to consider the situation. They appointed a committee of four to confer with Agent Brown. The committee waited on the agent at his office and told him the strikers would, under no circumstances, return to work except that the blemish be abolished.

The agent replied that this would be putting competent and incompetent men on a par, and said the company could not accede to their request. The committee said the weavers would not return to work unless this be complied with. The agent replied that if that was the case he could do nothing, and ordered the other departments now running to shut down to-morrow evening for an indefinite period. Both sides are firm. The striking weavers are orderly and enthusiastic. The notable feature is that the committee of the Knights of Labor has notified every saloon keeper to shut up until the trouble is over. The first place found selling will be raided.

Meeting of the Chautauquans.

EPPING, Aug. 6. The largest audience yet was present at the fifth and last day's meetings of the Chautauquans at Hedding camp ground. The morning lecture was by Rev. J. Buckley, of New York, the afternoon lecture by Rev. B. K. Pierce, of Boston, and Rev. J. W. Hamilton, of Boston, lectured in the evening.

THE TRIAL OF CUTTING.

The Judge Pronounces Him Guilty.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 6. A special from El Paso says: The trial of Editor Cutting was set for 10 o'clock yesterday morning and at that hour the Mexican authorities of the court, Consul Brigham and clerks, the prisoner and a few Mexican citizens and representatives of the El Paso press assembled in the small court room, furnished with two tables and a few chairs. At 1 o'clock the prosecuting attorney, J. M. Sierra, and James E. Yselas, the attorney for the defense, announced that they were ready for trial. After the affidavit of Medina and other evidence had been introduced Cutting was offered a chance to speak, but simply stated that he could not recognize the court and that he was in the hands of his government. The Judge then pronounced him guilty and the court adjourned. The Judge has fifteen days in which to pronounce sentence.

THE GRAND ARMY.

Another Crowded Concert.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6. The Pavilion was again crowded last night with a dense mass of people to listen to a repetition of the grand concert of Wednesday night by 700 voices, given to the Grand Army of the Republic. As early as 6 o'clock Market and Larkin streets were crowded for blocks on each side. The crush was tremendous, and although fully 10,000 persons managed to gain admittance, there were many who were unable to get in. The concerts have proven a great success and created the greatest enthusiasm.

Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief.

Gen. S. V. Beckers, of San Francisco, was unanimously elected Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief.

The Trouble with the Lasters.

BROCKTON, Mass., Aug. 6. The Manufacturers' executive committee met this morning, as a result the following statement was forwarded to the Lasters' Protective Union: A statement has gone out to the public from your union that you, as a union, have no objections to any person working in the factory of J. B. Reynolds, therefore we make you the following offer to bring to a settlement the present difficulty:

We will agree to open our factories to former employés when the Lasters' Union will notify the public and our order that all are at liberty to return to work at Mr. Reynolds' and will not in any way prevent lasters from resuming work in his factory; also that you will use your influence to supply all factories with what lasters they may need, provided the present rule shall remain in force until November 1st.

COMMISSIONER SQUIRE'S CASE.

Examination by Mayor Grace Resumed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6. The examination by Mayor Grace into the charges made against Commissioner Squire, of the department of public works, was continued today. The 5th charge, that of neglect of duty whereby the interests and property of the city have been damaged and impaired, was read. This charge refers to the Fifth Avenue repavement job and it is claimed by the prosecution that after Squire had obtained $5,000 from the Board of Estimate for salary of engineer to superintend and carry on that work he neglected to appoint anyone to the position and therefore the work had been improperly performed. This charge was passed over and a hearing on the sixth charge begun. That is the one regarding the resignation letter. Auditor Lyon identified the signature of the letter as being that of Squire, as did also Smith, ex-deputy collector of the department of public works.

An Indictment by the Grand Jury.

It is rumored that the grand jury have found an indictment against Squire and Flynn on the evidence of ex-Alderman Charles B. Waite.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The Knights of Labor have engaged the Bangor Band to accompany them on their excursion one week from Monday.

About one hundred of the Belfast people including the nine, registered at the Windsor Hotel yesterday for dinner and tea.

The Penobscot River Steam Boiler Works have commenced operations upon the boiler for the Electric Lighting Company.

The water main on Broadway has been extended about one hundred feet. Little other work is being done in the water department at present.

Logs are selling in this market from $10.50 to $11.50 per thousand for spruce. Some of the owners think that there is likely to be a sudden change in these prices soon, but others are doubtful in regard to it.

Quite a party went through Bangor yesterday morning on their way to St. Stephen, N. B., their final destination being Campobello. The travel toward Kineo on the two trains yesterday was also very large.

Mr. Charles G. Andrews is breaking the yearling Von Moltke colt Susie H., owned by Mr. R. A. Hathorn. The animal shows a fine gait and is pronounced by the horsemen to be one of the best of her age in this section.

The Aroostook Exploration party is to present Hon. Fred Atwood, who managed the affair, an elegant gold headed cane in token of their appreciation of his efforts in behalf of the excursionists. It will be a very well deserved tribute.

The haying season is now nearly over, and the freight business all along the line of the Maine Central east of this city commences to increase. The mixed freight train for the west yesterday afternoon had thirty-two cars out of Bangor.

Another very pleasant excursion party went out to Phillips Pond yesterday afternoon. It was under the management of Mrs. Charles Woodman. The steamer Winonah was engaged for the afternoon and the weather was delightful for the trip.

Thomas Quinn, who is employed by Leighton, Davenport & Co., while using a sharp knife a few days ago cut off the ends of his thumb and two fingers. A physician dressed the wounds, and it will be some time before he is able to use the hand.

At the last meeting of the City Council the Committee on City Property was authorized to purchase a new hearse for Maple Grove Cemetery, and next week Undertaker T. J. Cole will go to Springfield, Mass, buy the hearse and ship it to this city.

The West Branch drive is now in the main river and coming along splendidly, the lumbermen here being much pleased at the prospects for so soon receiving the logs. There are 150 men employed and the driving is very easy, there being a good pitch of water.

Messrs. J. F. Gerrity & Co. the portrait artists are doing a remarkable fine business in Bangor having plenty of orders. They have just engaged Miss S. L. Sawtelle who is very favorably known as an artist and who it is expected will continue permanently in their employ.

The fishing smack which lies near Kenduskeag bridge is a favorite resort every evening for young men who have a weakness for clams and lobsters. Capt. Alexander, the well known skipper, has been pronounced, to be the best cook on record and is sustaining that reputation finely.

There were five crowded parlor cars attached to the first train from the west yesterday afternoon and what was most remarkable the seats in them were all engaged three weeks ago. The Bar Harbor travel is now at its height and the Maine Central is quite heavily taxed to accommodate all the passengers.

The Bluffs is having a great boom at present. The house's completely packed and the proprietors have received more applications for rooms for August than they could possibly fill. Many prominent people are stopping there and the flourishing business that the hotel is doing is very gratifying to its proprietors.

B. H. Beale Post has arranged for a very attractive excursion next Friday. Accompanied by the Sons of Veterans and Ladies' Relief Corps and Drum Corps the Post will go to Camden. The trip will be made on the steamer Queen City and no doubt a large crowd of people will avail themselves of this fine opportunity for a sail down the river and return by moonlight.

The Queen City is doing a rushing excursion business down the bay and is very popular with the people there. Yesterday she took a party from Sedgwick to Bar Harbor, to-day she goes from Deer Isle to Bar Harbor with a large crowd and Monday from Castine to Bar Harbor. There has been no season when this boat has been in more demand as an excursion steamer.

General Manager Tucker of the Maine Central was in Bangor throughout yesterday forenoon accompanied by Civil Engineer Allen, Roadmaster Wogg and Bridge Builder Booker. They visited Old Town Thursday night and passed the time here in inspecting the buildings and yards of the company. They left for Portland on a special train at about a quarter past ten.

The lumbermen are already commencing to take out their permits for next winter's operations. S. N. Hodgdon of Brewer will lumber on Pine stream, one of the West Branch waters, and upon the borders of Chesuncook Lake. John Ross will probably operate on Scott brook. Morrison and Hunting will send crews to several different places, among them being Deer pond. Many others are now deciding upon the places for their operations.

Mr. R. E. Graves, the new chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service, passed yesterday forenoon in this city on business connected with the service. Mr. Graves went to Augusta on the afternoon train, where last evening a banquet was to be tendered Mr. J. F. Jefferds, the retiring chief clerk at the Cony House. A number of clerks running into Bangor went to Augusta last night to be present at the banquet and pay their respects to Mr. Jefferds, who is very popular with them.

BANGOR HISTORICAL MAGAZINE. The Bangor Historical Magazine for June, which has just been issued, is an unusually interesting number. For a frontispiece a splendid steel engraving of Chief Justice John A. Peters appears under which is his autograph. The likeness is simply perfect. The following is the table of contents of the magazine: Peters Family, Maine Branch; Early Settlement on Penobscot River, Orono, Milford, Argyle and Bradley; Hammond Family, of Bangor; Islands in Eastern Penobscot Bay; Abigail, Wife of John Adams; Letter of Gen. David Cobb to John Peters; Islands in Incorporation of Goldsborough: Islands in Blue Hill Bay; Islands in Frenchman's Bay; Incorporation of Sullivan; Additions and Corrections.

IT WAS NOT A BALL. Last evening as one of our prominent citizens was opening his box at the postoffice he was accosted by a strange individual who said: "Say, are you the chap who gives out the tickets?" The Bangor man expressed surprise at the question, but the inquirer explained that he thought the building was a hall and he had heard that tickets to a concert were to be given away there. He seemed much disappointed at learning that it was a postoffice and concerts only occurred there in the day time when the genial clerks exercised their voices upon "White Wings" or somebody played an accordeon.

NEW TEACHERS ELECTED. The School Committee held a session last evening and met several of the applicants for the position of principal of the Abbott Square Grammar School. They finally elected Mr. Charles A. Byram, of Freeport, and Mr. Byram was seen at the Bangor House and signified his acceptance of the position. There were a very large number of applicants and the committee had much difficulty in choosing between them. Mr. Byram graduated from Bowdoin this year and has had considerable experience as a teacher. Miss Therese M. Dillingham, Principal of the State street Intermediate School, will be unable to resume her position this fall, owing to illness, and Miss Mabel Garland has been chosen for the place. Miss Laura B. Coombs has been elected assistant. There have been no other changes in the teachers.

RETURN OF THE ATWOOD PARTY. The members of the Atwood exploration party arrived in this city yesterday noon on the Flying Yankee from Houlton. They were looking somewhat tired but reported a most royal good time. Hon. Samuel Thorne President of the New Brunswick Railway joined the party at Vanceboro and on the way down he, together with General Manager Cram gave a reception to the Massachusetts delegation in the General Manager's private car. It was a most decided success being thoroughly enjoyed by every participant. Mr. Cram and wife accompanied the party throughout the journey and the former of course aided very greatly in making the visit a success. The excursionists could not find words in which to express their thanks to him for his many courtesies and careful attention to their wants. The most of the party left for the west on the afternoon train but quite a large number stopped off in this city some going to Bar Harbor. Mr. Atwood himself took the Bucksport train to return to his home after receiving the many goodbyes of the party.

THE GARDEN OF MAINE.

What the Atwood Explorers Found in Aroostook—Luxurious Vegetation and Unbounded Hospitality—Receptions in Caribou and Presque Isle—Everyone Delighted.

It is not a matter to cause surprise that a hundred and fifty persons, and among them many men representing the largest business enterprises of New England, should avail themselves of the opportunity offered by Hon. Fred Atwood, of Winterport, who has for years neglected no opportunity to call the attention of the whole country to the rich and fertile soil of Aroostook county, by aiding in placing its products before the people at every State and national exhibition that it has been possible to reach—to those who fully realize that this section of our State is more than four times as large as Rhode Island, a third larger than Connecticut, three-fourths as large as Vermont, and nearly as large as New Hampshire, and that only a comparatively small portion of this rich and fertile country has, as yet, been settled—that the areas not cultivated are covered with the most valuable timber, such as pine, spruce, hemlock, sugar maple and cedar, and that where the soil has been cleared and put under cultivation its fertility has been found almost unlimited, yielding bountiful crops for many years without fertilization. Of course the railroads, having an eye to future increase in business, are always ready to render all the aid in their power to induce people interested in the development of the resources of our State, and to furnish the best facilities at their command for them to do so, and when the managers of the Maine Central and New Brunswick Railway undertake to run trains for any purpose, the arrangements are as perfect as the best brains are capable of making them.

Perhaps it would not be out of place in this connection to say that some one is responsible for a great improvement in the management of the New Brunswick Railway. The names of Burpee and Gibson will always be remembered and honored for what they have accomplished in connection with the railroads of New Brunswick, and we have no fear of contradiction or exciting the least jealousy, when we say that everything that is not perfect is sure to be benefited by the infusion of a little Yankeedom. F. W. Cram, General Manager of four hundred and fifty miles of the New Brunswick Railway, is performing his duties to the perfect satisfaction of all concerned on both sides of the line. He was born in Bangor, educated in its city schools, and fitted for his present position on our roads, therefore its citizens have a right to take pride and claim some credit for whatever there is of value in his make-up.

Aroostook county not only offers a golden opportunity to the man who is contented with sufficient means for making himself and those dependent upon him comfortable—one who realizes that when he has accomplished this much, he has obtained all there is of real happiness in the accumulation of wealth, and therefore has no reason to complain of his lot, but there is also ample opportunity for the man who is ambitious to become wealthy, as there is a chance on every hand for him to suit his taste in regard to any business calling, his talents and education best fit him to adopt, and at the same time live in a community where free speech, a free press, and universal ballot is enjoyed in its true sense.

As citizens of Maine, we may well be proud of our State, of its extent, the variety of its productions and natural resources; of its industrious, intelligent and enterprising population. Aside from its agricultural products, its railroad and extensive coast, its valuable lumber, ice-fields, manufactories, and fishing grounds, open to us the commerce of the world.

The Aroostook exploration party arrived at Caribou at 6 P. M., after a most enjoyable day's ride. Carriages were in waiting to take all to the several public houses where they were most hospitably provided for, rooms being provided for as many as the capacity of the houses would admit without crowding, and the remainder were assigned to most comfortable lodgings in the homes of private citizens. An excellent band occupied the band stand in front of one of the public houses, and played during the evening until about eight o'clock, when it was announced that the citizens proposed to hold an impromptu meeting at Clark's Hall and all were invited to assemble there and listen to a few five minute speeches. The large and well finished hall was quickly occupied, every seat being filled. Hon. S. W. Matthews called the meeting to order and gave the party, on behalf of the citizens of Caribou and vicinity, a most hearty, warm, and eloquent welcome, assuring the visitors that they would receive every attention his fellow citizens could bestow upon them, and they could feel assured their hearts were fuller of kindness and hospitality than their means would enable them to express. He gave an interesting account of the wonderful growth and increase in wealth of their beautiful and enterprising village and the surrounding country.

Hon. Fred Atwood in response returned his thanks to every citizen of Caribou for the generous provisions they had made for the visitors; he had aided those interested in getting up this exploration party because he had always felt an interest in the State of Maine—he believed Maine offered stronger inducements to enterprising young men than any other part of our country, and that all were beginning to believe it, but attention could never have been called to it without the aid of railroads. He then stated that there was a gentleman in the party from Massachusetts, who had just returned from an extended route through the western States and Territories, he referred to Hon. Daniel Needham, of Boston.

Mr. Needham on taking the platform, said he was not unexpectedly called upon for the gentleman had warned him before he left the house that he should call on him for a five minute speech, and the man who could deny so generous and public-spirited a gentleman as Fred Atwood, must be possessed of a very cold heart. He had traveled extensively, and nowhere had he seen more beautiful scenery, delightful landscape views, greener and more fertile fields; nowhere had he met a more hospitable, intelligent and enterprising people than in the State of Maine. At no public house had he seen better food or more prompt and efficient caterers than at the house where he ate his supper—everything surpassed his most sanguine expectations. He had seen the products of Aroostook's soil on exhibition at the various fairs, and they were such as would be creditable to any State in America, but he had no idea of the capacity, various resources, and the extent of the territory until to-day. He had been to the Pacific slope, California, Kansas, New Mexico and Nebraska, had seen the true type of American character, and nowhere had he found better specimens of men and women or a place where the English language was more correctly spoken than in the State of Maine. He could produce more on one acre of Aroostook soil with its natural rainfall, than on one hundred of the dry and sandy soils of Arizona and New Mexico. Maine's exhibits have not only been creditable to herself and those who stimulated such an effort, but to the Nation. When you help one State you help all. He intimated that railroads had been slow in penetrating our eastern territories. What, said he, would the west be to-day but for the railroads, but it is well to remember that the agricultural community for the most part sustain them. To-day this republic is on the road to prosperity. The time is not far distant when the American citizen will be recognized as the true type of the highest state of civilization. Mr. Needham's remarks were scholarly and eloquent and often applauded.

Hon. A. C. Stockin, of Boston, was next called upon. Maine was his old home when a boy, but he had lived away some years, and seen many parts of the country, and he was free to say he had found no such beautiful scenery as is to be found in Maine, her soil is rich and productive, she raises the best horses, has the purest and hardest ice, her lumber is the best in the market, her citizens are the most genial people in the world to travel with; he loved her girls and boys; therefore, he had taught his children to love the State and for this purpose he made his annual visits in order to teach them to love it as he does. The audience was much pleased with his remarks, the true spirit and exact words of which we do not pretend to give.

Hon. Harrison Hume of Boston was the next speaker. He, also, spent his boyhood in Washington County, Maine. He had but a few words to say and first of all would say to these people husband your resources. He had seen much good timber wantonly destroyed, therefore he would warn them of the danger. You have immense forests: preserve protect and see that they are not wantonly wasted. If you catch a man setting fire to them, shoot him on the spot; those forests and your fertile lands are your best property and must be carefully husbanded.

Secondly, we wished to say a word to the boys. Be not carried away with the idea of city life. Our cities are overrun with young men who have been led astray for want of employment. They are led on by a set of thieves who are possessed of an insane desire to get money in order to live beyond their means. He made an earnest plea to them to remain at home. He told the parents that if they would keep their children at home they must put out their money freely, establish good schools and see to it that teachers are qualified for their work. Make your homes attractive as possible. If you continue as you have begun, you will always have what you claim—the finest county in New England.

Hon. C. B. Pratt, of Worcester, Mass., made a short and amusing speech, full of good advice to the boys. He said some years since they formed a Board of Trade in Worcester, whose business it was to look after the business interests of the city, and it had proved a success. Wherever an opening was made they took advantage of it and started new manufactories.

Gen. Charles Hamlin, of Bangor, was called upon and said, notwithstanding the lateness of the hour he would say a few words, as the remarks of Mr. Pratt had met with his hearty approval. He believed in these manufacturing enterprises. They were just what are wanted in the farming communities to create markets for the farmers' products. Manufactures and agriculture should go hand in hand. In concluding, he said he could most heartily endorse all that had been said in regard to the hospitality of the citizens of Caribou.

Well merited praise was most heartily bestowed upon Manager Cram by all the speakers.

Hon. T. W. Vose was called on but declined to respond, but called for three hearty cheers for the citizens of Caribou which were given with a will.

Wednesday morning the excursionists were up "bright and early" to find teams and drivers standing at the doors in waiting to take them in whatever direction they chose to order, and in a short time the roads were full of them, and on every avenue leading out of the village continuous fields of herds grass or clover or some kinds of grain or potatoes as high as the highest wheels of their carriages were to be seen. Nor was this all; away in the distance, on all sides were to be seen the most varying and beautiful shades of green resting upon the meadows, slopes and hills evidencing the same strong, rich and productive soil, being handled by industrious and intelligent husbandmen; was it any wonder to the citizens that their guests so often requested them to stop, that they might take the wonderful and magnificent sight all in? The grass on account of the showers was mostly standing but not suffering.

At one o'clock P. M. all repaired to the station, and after taking leave of their new made friends, and hearty cheers for them, which were heartily responded to by the citizens, the train was started for Presque Isle, where it arrived about two o'clock, to meet with the same sincere welcome by the citizens, who were in crowds at the depot, which had been extended to us from the first start. The arrangements which had been made by Messrs. Atwood and Crum and the citizens' committee were so perfect that every member of the party was most comfortably cared for as quickly as if they had arrived at their own homes, and as soon as fed and rested teams were at the doors, and again they were allowed to order their drivers where they willed as there was nothing to conceal, and whatever direction was taken the same beautiful crops and beautiful scenery awaited them. In the evening another reception was given at one of the churches. Edward Wiggin, Esq., called the meeting to order and gave the visitors a most cordial welcome. Hon. Fred Atwood responded, explaining the object of the visit and introduced several gentlemen of the party who made eloquent and happy speeches.

Presque Isle is noted for its thriving industries and rapid growth. In 1860 the towns of Presque Isle and Mayville had but one thousand three hundred inhabitants. In 1858 the buildings in the village were mostly wiped out by a forest fire, and in May 1884, fire again visited the place and destroyed the most valuable portion of the village, the loss amounting to $125,000, only one-half being covered by insurance. Six months from the time of this disaster its energetic and persevering business men who were the sufferers had established themselves in new and more commodious quarters, having built one block of seven stores besides several smaller buildings all built in the most approved modern style, and filled them with every variety of goods their customers were in need of, and best of all, the farmers and lumbermen in the vicinity seem to appreciate their efforts and bestow upon every branch of the business enterprises a liberal share of their patronage and a wonderful amount of business is now being transacted in all kinds of merchandise.

There are at the present time ten dry goods stores, several hardware and stove stores, numerous grocery establishments, druggists, harness makers, milliners, shoemakers, tailors, all occupying large and commodious buildings and the place is not destitute of ministers, lawyers or physicians. The village is also blessed with two enterprising newspapers, the Herald and Star. The first paper was started at this place in 1857, before the incorporation of the town. Newspaper publishers are always the first to thrust their "headlights" into promising and rich localities, even ahead of stage coaches or railroads, and seldom fail to accomplish their hearts desire—to encourage and help build up all the worthy enterprises a new undertaking stands in need of while struggling for an existence.

This village is situated upon either side of Presque Isle stream and was first settled in 1831, and incorporated in 1859. There are seven roads converging and leading into it, one from each of the towns of Easton, Fort Fairfield, Caribou, Blaine, Washburn, Mapleton and Ashland. All but two of these enterprising villages are within twelve miles. It supports a grist mill with two runs of stones which grinds from 75 to 100,000 bushels of grain annually; a rotary saw mill which manufactures one and a half million feet of long lumber annually, the most of which is used in town; also clapboard and lath machines and a planer and a steam shingle machine capable of cutting thirty-two thousand shingles daily. All are owned by Johnson & Phair.

Wm. D. Graves, Jr., also manufactures lumber in all its various branches. Mr. Isaac McGlauflin runs a carding machine and cards from seven to eight tons of wool annually. Johnson & Phair also own several starch factories which are run to their full capacity during the starch making season, turning out about 1,000 tons annually. Parkhurst & Stevens, north Presque Isle, and George W. Collins also run starch factories.

Four churches stand in various conspicuous places in the village, evidencing that the citizens are willing to maintain religious worship and religious culture, and as reminders of the social Christian duties of every day life, helping those who come beneath their influence to a high and noble endeavor and shed the warmth of righteousness along their pathway.

Thursday morning, at 7.30 o'clock, the exploration party left for Houlton in the most happy state of mind possible for human beings. Quite a number of the prominent citizens of Presque Isle accompanied them as far as Woodstock. The visit at Houlton will appear hereafter.

BELFAST AGAIN DEFEATED.

By Bangor's Nine Ball Players—An Immense Crowd and a Great Game—Brilliant Fielding of the Home Nine Wins the Game.

The ball grounds at Maplewood presented a most animated scene yesterday afternoon when the Bangors met and defeated for the fifth time the Belfasts, "the best nine in the State outside the Portlands." The visitors came to this city on the steamer Rockland, accompanied by over two hundred of their strong supporters, and never was a crowd more confident of victory. It must be confessed that the friends of the home team were not much more than hopeful in regard to the result, but they underestimated the strength of our players as greatly as did the visitors. Since last playing here the Belfasts have strengthened their team by the addition of Sweeney, first base, who talks a great deal and plays ball very well, McAndless, a brilliant shortstop, and Callahan, who makes a better catcher than he does a fielder.

The weakest point on their nine is the pitcher's box. Barrett, their regular pitcher, retired from the box after the fifth inning, the Bangors batting him heavily. Chatterton went in and although he was batted only in one inning he had poor control of the ball, giving a number of men their base on balls. The visitors did not bat Oxley very hard, although their number of safe hits was but one less than that of the Bangors. He pitched a splendid game and was splendidly supported by Earl who was very generously applauded by the crowd for his work.

Ray bore off a good part of the honors of the afternoon, making two beautiful fly catches and batting terrifically, and at the right moment to bring in scores, and running bases superbly. Long fielded brilliantly, taking a liner from Goodwin's bat, which was one of the finest catches ever seen on the grounds. Burns and Dearth made pretty fly catches, while Kelley did great work at first, his error, the third for the season, being excusable. Rudderham batted in a manner that was simply surprising and his base running was perfect. Dearth also distinguished himself in the latter regard. The Belfasts, always excepting Knowlton, did not play their fielding game. Larrabee made brilliant catches in the left field. The crowd was very good natured. Parks umpired very well and impartially, his only questionable decisions being close and in favor of the visitors. The score:

NOTES.

Next Monday the Bangors will go to Belfast. It was the intention to charter the steamer Queen City but as there is to be an excursion on the steamer Forest city to Belfast and Rockland the club and their friends have concluded to go and return on the Forest City. At Bucksport tickets will be on sale at A. B. Ames, and at other landings tickets will be obtained on board the boat.

Manager Parker in behalf of the many friends of Oxley presented that popular pitcher last evening with a fine new suit and hat as a recognition of their appreciation of the excellent work which he is doing for the Bangors.

Captain Rudderham gets a box of cigars and two dollars in cash for his home run yesterday, the cash being offered by a gentleman before the game. As the Captain is not a smoker his friends will probably reap that part of the benefits of the home run. Rudderham's batting average is now second only to Ray's!

The general opinion is that the Belfasts need some more "outside" players.

The Rocklands may play here next Wednesday.

Four boys broke into the grand stand at Maplewood yesterday forenoon to hide until the game commenced and thus escape the sight of the police who were to watch the fence. The young fellows were discovered, arrested and brought to the police station. They will be prosecuted to-day as a warning to others who are constantly trying to steal admission.

The Bangor management promptly paid the Castors forty dollars for their expenses notwithstanding there was no game Thursday. Visiting clubs here do not have to wait for their guarantees.

There was much complaint yesterday in regard to the inaccuracy of the batting order on the score cards. To give satisfaction this should be guarded against.

There was no use for fireworks on the steamer Rockland last night.

AMUSEMENTS.

Royal Marionettes.

There was a good audience at the Opera House last evening to witness the entertainment given by Bell's Royal Marionettes and every person left the house in a highly pleased state of mind. There has been no performance here for a long time so decidedly unique and amusing and it deserved a packed house. Zara Semon with his acts fairly brought the house down and in fact there was but very little but that deserved the warmest commendation. The most valuable presents went last evening, as follows: G. A. Maxwell, 147 Cedar street, silver watch; H. M. Wiswell, chamber set, 12 pieces; Mrs. F. B. Irish, Brewer, china tea set, 56 pieces; C. J. Horton, 107 State street, two student lamps. This afternoon at 2.30 there will be a matinee and this evening a regular performance. There should be a large attendance. The five best presents in the evening will include the above and a barrel of flour.

OUR BAR HARBOR LETTER.

Various Matters of News and Gossip.

[Regular Correspondence of the Whig and Courier.]

The concert season opened at Bar Harbor this summer with a musicale given at eleven o'clock Wednesday morning in the music room of the West End Hotel. But with all the great and well known amateur artists now at Bar Harbor, the season was opened by Miss Harriet A. Shaw, a Bangor girl. No doubt the people of Bangor fully appreciate the talent of Miss Shaw, but if they could have seen the effect produced on that cultivated audience as her own composition, "Segoria and Madrid," was sung by Miss Munger with harp accompaniment by the composer herself, they would have been convinced that Bangor can produce a genius in music. Miss Shaw's composition is not elaborate, but it comes from a soul of music. Mr. Van Raalte, the Boston violinist, Miss Boynton, cantatrice, and M. King, tenor, assisted.

The West End hotel is flourishing.

Mr. S. Alphonso, a young Spanish gentlemen from New York, is at the Atlantic House. He is a friend of the De Montes, rich Cubans, and is a thorough society man.

Wednesday evening George Riddle whom everybody knows read at the Rodick Music room in aid of the Bar Harbor Public Library. We fancy he will be able to turn over at least three hundred dollars, a pretty good figure for one evening. No man is so great a favorite here as Mr. Riddle. He interprets every part with great power and in perfect taste.

OUR ORONO LETTER.

Various Interesting Items.

Thursday last a very pleasant day was passed by a party of excursionists from Orono composed of professional and business men with their families, who, to the number of fifty, visited Newcomb's Landing, Pushaw, being conveyed in Mosher's pleasant barge and private carriages. The party originated and was under the management of John M. Chase, Esq. Mrs. Sparks of Bangor very kindly gave the party the use of her beautiful cottage, an act of courtesy which was highly appreciated. The ride out and back was fine, the party returning late in the afternoon, well pleased with their visit.

The St. Mary's Parish, Orono, and their friends will make their annual excursion Saturday to Islesboro. The place is an attractive one and the excursion will undoubtedly be liberally patronized.

THE PISCATAQUIS REPUBLICANS.

A Large and Enthusiastic Convention.

[Regular Correspondence Whig and Courier.]

The Republican County Convention met in Central Hall Thursday, 96 delegates being present. The convention was called to order by Hon. Elias J. Hale of Foxcroft, who called Hon. J. H. Pullen of Monson to the chair, after which Rev. A. G. Hill of Dover offered prayer. T. P. Elliott of Monson and F. G. Perkins of Medford were appointed secretaries by the chair. While the committee on credentials was attending to its duty the convention was addressed by A. C. Dixon, Esq., of Medford, C. H. B. Woodbury, Esq., and Hon. E. Flint of Dover, and W. E. Parsons, Esq., of Foxcroft. The committee on credentials reported two sets of delegates from Milo, favorable to O. W. Freeman and H. F. Daggett as candidates for Senators. This matter called out considerable discussion, but was settled by admitting the delegation approved of by the town committee.

In the vote for candidate for Senator O. W. Freeman had 11 votes, H. Hamlin had 23 votes and H. F. Daggett had 58 votes and was declared the nominee. Hon. Elias J. Hale was renominated for Judge of Probate by acclamation, as were also W. E. Parsons, Esq., for County Attorney, A. M. Warren for Register of Deeds and Otis Martin for Sheriff. In the vote for County Commissioner from the west part of the county S. O. Dinsmore, of Medford, had 1 vote, Wm. G. Thompson, of Foxcroft, had 22 votes; Jesse Barber, of Abbot, had 53 votes and was renominated. In the vote for Commissioner from the eastern part of the county, B. L. Fowler had 26 votes and S. O. Dinsmore, of Medford, had 57 votes and was declared the nominee.

The following gentlemen were appointed on the County Committee: Elias J. Hale of Foxcroft, G. W. Howe of Milo, C. L. Dunning of Brownville, L. B. Flint of Abbot, C. E. Packard of Blanchard. The committee on resolutions made the following report, which was accepted:

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the resolutions of the Republican party of this State and Fourth Congressional District, as set forth in their respective conventions in June last.

Resolved, That the Republican party of Maine, which, when it came into power in 1857, found every vestige of prohibition swept from the Statute books by its Democratic predecessor, has, in face of determined partisan opposition, enacted and maintained during its organization, vigorous laws for the suppression of drinking houses and tippling shops, against drunkenness and in favor of temperance; has from time to time enacted salutary amendments to such laws, as the friends of temperance have asked or suggested, providing for the most efficient enforcement of the same; has labored successfully to give constitutional sanction to the most rigorous temperance code that ever stood the test of an equal length of time in any State or country; and now stands unqualifiedly committed and pledged to advance the interests of this great cause.

Resolved, That this convention is in favor of a strict enforcement of the law prohibiting the illegal sale of intoxicants, pledging its firm support to and asking the cooperation of all good citizens with the officers of the law in their efforts to enforce the same.

Resolved, That we believe it to be for the best interests of the people of Maine, that the Hon. Joseph R. Bodwell should be the next Governor; the Hon. Charles A. Boutelle continue to represent us in Congress; and for this County that the nominees of this Convention should be elected; therefore we will use all honorable means and our united efforts, to carry into effect the above resolutions.

A Mind of Her Own.

(Concluded.)

CHAPTER III.

Having, so-to speak, crossed the Rubicon, Nora, woman-like, began to tremble at what she had done. She withdrew her hands and sat down again

"He'll kiss me now," she said to herself, "and then I shall hate him."

Fortunately, no thought of taking advantage of the privileges of his position entered Wilson's mind. He did not even approach her.

"Thank you, Miss Adams," he said gravely. "You are very good, and if I can help it, you shall never regret what you have said to-day." After a pause he said: "Don't you think we had better go? You must have had enough of this place. I will wait outside till you are ready."

He moved towards the door of the cell. As he reached it, she stood before him.

"You have never kissed me yet!" she said in tones of deepest reproach. This ceremony accomplished, she let him go, and tried to arrange her somewhat disheveled hair. "I must look a terrible fright," she reflected. "He must care for me very much not to have repented on seeing me."

Let us get to one of the parks, or some other quiet place," she said when they were outside. "I have a great deal to say to you."

Both when they were seated in Kensington Gardens, Nora was silent and embarrassed. She had meant to play the part of Queen Cophetua, to announce to Wilson what a happy stroke he had made this day, and thereby resume the dignity she felt she had lost. But when the time to speak came, she was conscious only "that she had been acting a lie for the last ten days, and masquerading in a fashion for which a sensible man might reasonably despise her. Nora Clyne, who had never before in her life feared mortal man or woman, stood in awe of this shopman, whom by no other qualification to her respect than his simple honesty and his regard for her.

It was Wilson who began the conversation on the most matter-of-fact basis.

"I have been thinking for some time of leaving Blacklock's and setting up for myself," he said, "and I fancy this would be a good opportunity to do it. I have a little money—about £200—that my uncle left me; so I can afford to do it without much risk. Still, if you think it unwise—"

"Certainly not," replied Nora; "you couldn't possibly keep on good terms both with Sir George and with me. But," she spoke meekly, and he did not perceive the mischievous light in her eye, "will you want me to serve in the shop?"

"No—no. I will work for you. Perhaps you wouldn't mind helping me in the buying of goods, however? You have better taste than I."

"I will do whatever you like; and I want to tell you that I—I have a little money, too."

"Why, I—I thought——"

"Yes; I know. You thought I couldn't pay half a sovereign; but you are wrong. I—I'm quite rich. I have two thousand a year, and I only went into Blacklock's shop as a caprice, to see what the life was like. And my name isn't Adams at all; it is Nora Clyne, and I feel that I have deceived you abominably."

"Deceived me! No; but I never suspected this. If I had——oh, Miss Ad—I mean, Miss Cl——I don't know what to call you."

"I think you had better call me Nora," suggested Miss Clyne, sweetly.

"If I had known this I should never have ventured to tell you I cared for you," said he.

"And I should have lost my best chance of happiness, she said.

"Now that you have told me," he went on, "I feel that I must withdraw."

"Withdraw?" cried Nora.

"Yes."

"If you do, I shall call you a mercenary wretch."

"Mercenary! Not that, Miss Clyne, surely."

"Yes, mercenary; for if you give me up because I happen to be rich, it will be evident that you care more for my money than for me, that it and your own pride are of more importance in your eyes than I and my happiness. You can do as you like, of course you can give me up—you can jilt me," she said vindictively, because I happen to be something different from what you thought; but if you shall despise you. And—and I respected you so much, and thought you above nasty mean considerations of this sort."

"Oh, this is terrible!" cried poor Wilson in genuine despair.

To give up the girl you love out of respect to propriety, and to be assured by her that she will scorn you for your sacrifice, is undeniably a severe trial.

"But think what your friends will say," he protested still.

"I know what they will say, and I don't care a straw for any of them. I haven't the slightest respect for them in their prejudices," insisted Nora.

And just as she uttered the last words who should draw near but Mrs. Pentfeather.

She was meditating on a very serious subject (the fashion of a new dinner-gown), but she came out of her reverie at the sound of voices, and lifting up her eyes she saw her cousin.

"Why, Nora, what be you?" she exclaimed; "I did not expect to see you here at this hour. And this gentleman?"

Lou gazed inquiringly at Wilson, vaguely familiar with his face, but unable to localize it.

"This gentleman, Lou," said Nora boldly, "is Mr. Wilson, whom you may have noticed in Mr. Blacklock's shop, and whom you must now know as my future husband."

"There!" she added in a low tone to her lover, "you can't, for shame's sake, throw me over now."

"Your future—what?" cried Mrs. Pentfeather in the one moment of agonized doubt that preceded her being swallowed by a vast wave of despair. Then, as the latter engulfed her, she added: "I might have known this would be the end of it. Oh, this is terrible! What am I to do? What shall I say to Sir George?"

"There is no need for you to say anything to Sir George Radford," replied Nora; "I will announce my engagement to him."

A change, an expression of surprise and sternness, had come over Wilson's face as Nora mentioned her ex-guardian's name. He stepped between the two ladies.

"Are you speaking of Sir George Radford of Swarfedale Hall?" he asked.

"Yes," answered Nora, surprised in turn.

"May I ask what relation he bears to you?"

"He was my guardian till last January, when I came of age. Do you know him?"

"Only by name; but I knew his sister when I was a boy."

"His sister!" exclaimed Nora. "She who——"

Lou interrupted:

"You must come home with me, Nora. I won't have a scene here. As for that—that person—I will say nothing to him. I will telegraph for Sir George to come up, and he will arrange with him. I suppose money will do it?"

"No, madam," said Wilson firmly; "money will not do it. I have no claim on Miss Clyne but what she chooses to permit. If she dismisses me, I shall go without protest; but no one else in the world shall induce me to give her up. And perhaps Sir George Radford may be less opposed to me than you think."

Mrs. Penfeather protested only by a contemptuous sniff.

Nora whispered:

"Arthur, you are splendid!"

"How do you know my name?" he asked in surprise.

"One finds out those things," she answered vaguely, not caring to confess that her ex-companion, Miss Jones, was her informant.

Sir George Radford will probably be here the day after to-morrow," said Mrs. Penfeather. "You will hear from him. Till then, I forbid you to have any communication with Miss Clyne."

"I do not acknowledge your authority to make such a condition," replied Wilson, "but I will comply with it."

And Mrs. Penfeather bore her cousin away.

"It is better not to see her again at present," he reflected when he was alone. "If it was only caprice and self-will that made her accept me, she will change her mind when she finds her friends against it. If she is firm, I suppose I must bend my price to make it easier for her. It's a strange chance! I wonder how the old gentleman will take it!"

Two days later Wilson received a note dated from Mrs. Penfeather's house in Kensington, in which Sir George Radford presented his compliments to Mr. Blank Wilson, and begged to enclose a check for £10, in consideration for which Sir George hoped Mr. Wilson would release Miss Clyne from his hasty and ill-considered promise into which he had entrapped her on an act which, Sir George felt bound to state, could only be accounted for by Mr. Wilson's being ignorant of the manners and obligations of a gentleman. If £10 were not sufficient, Mr. Wilson was requested to state at what price he rated his claim on Miss Clyne. Any reasonable demand would be complied with. This courteous note Mr. Wilson answered in person.

Sir George Radford, a stubborn and self-willed lord of the soil, had thought it would be an easy task to brush this "counter-jumper," and had a ready intimated to Mrs. Penfeather that only her weakness and stupidity were responsible for the said counter-jumper's presumption in having been nipped in the bud forty-eight hours before.

"I will settle the matter in half an hour, I promise you" said he.

Sir George had arranged the scene in his own mind. It was to be a mere auction. Wilson would bluster, of course, but as the baronet offered more and more for the redemption of Nora's promise, he would calm down and accept the largest sum he could obtain. Sir George was prepared to pay pretty dearly for the girl's freedom. He had fixed on £500 as his ultimatum, and did not expect to ransom her for less. But that sum was reached and Wilson stood firm.

"You're an avaricious scoundrel!" said the baronet, who had determined to advance to overcome the shopman by displaying the superior breeding of a gentleman. "How much do you want?"

"Nothing but Miss Clyne's assurance that she wishes to be free from her promise to me," was the reply.

"Well, I give you that assurance."

"Excuse me; you have no authority to speak for Miss Clyne. I must have the assurance from her own lips or in her own writing."

As Sir George knew very well that he could not obtain this, he fell a-swearing once more, and in the course of his remarks was very severe on the impertinence of such a one as Wilson aspiring to the hand of a lady of family and fortune.

"I admit the superiority of fortune," interrupted Wilson; but as to family——May I ask if you consider Miss Clyne's birth superior to your own?"

Sir George gasped at the mere suggestion of such a thing. Nobody's birth was, or could be, better than his. On principle, he believed in himself and all thereunto belonging.

"Certainly not," he snorted. "The superiority is, indeed, on the other side, though the difference is not great."

"Not great enough to make a marriage between the two families out of the question?"

"No, assuredly. If either of my boys had lived, I would have had him married to Nora long before this, and saved a world of trouble."

"And yet Sir George," the young man went on, "you think the wife who would not be more than good enough for your son is far too good for your nephew."

"My nephew! I have no nephew."

"Yes, you have. You had a sister who married the organist of a village church."

Who disgraced herself irretrievably by running away with a pipe-tuner," translated Sir George.

"Well if you choose to put it that way," said Wilson calmly. "The fact remains that Clara Radford, your sister, married Arthur Wilson, and became my mother. I brought the necessary certificates with me, thinking it might have to mention the relationship between us. I am not proud of it; I have never spoken of it to any one, and if I did not care very much for Miss Clyne, I would not own it now."

"You—you're not proud of it!" stammered Sir George, in utter amazement. He had glanced over the papers Wilson had laid before him, and was disgusted to find they were evidently genuine.

"No," replied his nephew: "I am much more proud of my uncle—my father's brother—who took me to his own home when my parents died. It was he who supported your sister during the last months of her life; brought her up, educated me, as well as he had means to do, and did what he thought best to set me up in life. I am proud of my kinship with him, Sir George; I am not proud to be of the same blood as you."

"This alters everything," said Sir George, ignoring Wilson's last words. "You are not merely my nephew—my own child—being made of your own flesh—the future owner of Swarfedale Hall."

"I never knew that," said Wilson, surprised in turn.

"But it's the fact return ed the baronet in a tone of grumbling content. "Of course this makes a little difference in the world. My nephew is good enough match for anybody, and you may take Nora with all my heart—that is, if she'll have you when she learns that you are of decent birth, but I don't think she will. Her family for you is mere romance and abstraction; it will vanish when she finds out that I have no objection to the match."

"I venture to hope you will, sir," said Wilson gravely. "I think better of Miss Clyne's judgment than to believe what you say."

"That's your vanity, because she was ready to jump into your arms. But I'll make her marry you."

"You are very kind; but even if I did not think your intervention would be useless, I should prefer not to profit by it. Nora must take one of her own free will or not at all."

"Well, she won't, I tell you."

But she did. Nora Clyne's self-will was not the mere obstinacy of a fool, and she was glad to find circumstances to justify her choice. She was determined to marry Arthur Wilson, but she was woman enough to like him better as her gallant's heir than as Mr. Blacklock's assistant. But she has never regretted her experience of life in a draper's shop; nor has Wilson found cause to wish he had not married a wife with a mind of her own.—All the Year Round.

To the Cuticura Remedies I owe My Health, My Happiness, and My Life.

A day never passes that I do not think and speak kindly of the CUTICURA REMEDIES. Seven years ago all of a dozen lumps formed on my neck, ranging in size from a cherry stone to an orange. The largest ones were frightful to look at, and painful to bear; people turned aside when they saw me, in disgust, and I was ashamed to be seen in the street or in society. Physicians and hospitals treated me, and all medicines failed to do any good. In a moment of despair I tried the Cuticura Remedies—Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, and Cuticura Soap, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, externally, and Cuticura Resolvent, the new Blood Purifier, internally; the small lumps (as I call them) gradually disappeared, and the large ones broke, in about two weeks, discharging large quantities of matter, leaving two slight scars in my neck to-day to tell the story of my suffering. My weight then was one hundred and fifteen pounds; my weight now is one hundred and sixty-one pounds, healthy and strong. Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, and Cuticura Soap, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, externally, and Cuticura Resolvent, the new Blood Purifier, internally, are the only medicines I have used. My case was regarded by physicians as one of the most remarkable on record. I am only too glad to add my testimony to the many you have received, in the hope that sufferers may be induced to try the Cuticura Remedies, and be convinced that there is a positive cure for every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula. For an infant may be made
